

Coming this Fall -- Change Lab!

Change Lab®

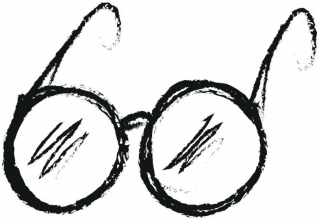

Yes, we are all emerging from our Covid cocoons and many (too, too many) have lost treasured people within our families and among our friends, but somehow one day we begin to feel the warmth of the sun and the prospect of meeting friends again. Sharing and casting off our heavy cords of despair. Here we are.

Somehow in all of that, this little amazing band of nonprofit compatriots has kept cooking, noshing and working on our vision for an educational track that can bring gamified, immersive learning to the nonprofit world. We are starting with the first course on major gifts fundraising, as that's seriously at our team core, but there is a yummy menu of much more coming.

Right now, we are finishing up three virtual realities that we're pretty excited about. They will show someone what it might feel like to do a tour around a space yet to be built, but, of course, with Covid, we now have interested supporters for our organizations that are reluctant to come anywhere live at the moment still and experiencing any space virtually is an exciting offering. And, of course, we can customize to the n'th degree. Got that down.....

Wait till you see them

 Did you say cooking?
Yup.
Brought out a cool cookbook.

And, of course, somewhere along the way we decided to produce a cool cookbook. The story of our team and our love of sharing and making a meal together feel like the best idea we ever had! We became four cook authors from the UK and the US.

The recipes are healthy, (well till you get to the desserts), diverse, and full of life; just like us. $24.00 US. Goes toward our work. order here for all your gift needs.

Interview with Wendy Bruce, Change Lab's Director of Coaching

We listened for two years to John Zuur Platten, our chief technology advisor, and one of the smartest guys we know, tell us that we should have our coaching program concept available to anybody, not just as part of the end of our Intermediate level courses. Of course, he was right.

And, here we are, ten months of planning later. Led by Wendy Bruce, a deeply experienced and fully licensed coach (xxxx and xxxx), we have now designed a spectacular program that has brought together ten similarly attractive coaches from all around the world (Holland, England, Canada, Germany and the US), who are each highly trained professional coaches, extraordinarily talented, and committed to supporting success for anyone working in the nonprofit sector.

Wendy's advanced coaching methodology brings our coaching team forward as a skilled and transformative team. We couldn't be more proud of each of them. Here's a peek at our founding coach roster.

Oh by the way, when we asked Wendy to take on this role, she never hesitated for a moment. That will always impress us and something that makes us very, very grateful. Lucky Change Lab.

be treated and working from there.”
Find the rest of the interview here!

Q: What inspired you to begin coaching?
What was your trajectory?

A: “I’ve been managing others for many years but I never had any support, coaching, or training since I learned a lot of my rules about managing others by making mistakes. So what engaged me in coaching was that I have spent, at that point, coaching more than 20 years in human resources, working with managers who had challenges with their employees, so I found ways of educating the managers and coaching them to help them deal with their issues. Coaching was more a matter of how I would want to Watch our interview with Elias Lumarda!

Listen to how Elias, Change Lab's executive producer, started building his time with Change Lab, first as a 2019 intern in 2019, and then stepping into this important role in late 2020. His guidance along the way has brought enthusiasm, organization and ideas and his treasured partnership is highly valued by the team!

Watch the full interview here!

Change Lab's new podcast- "Agents of Change"

Change Lab's "Agents of Change" new six-part podcast, co-hosted by Ed Lin and Nancy Brimhall, offers some pretty amazing conversations about what people have done to push the dial forward in many different sectors.

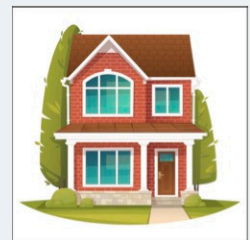

The journeys to innovation and the power of a pioneering spirit, have brought new ways of thinking, new products, and the recognition of how change has made our shared world better.

With guest speakers like Hall of Fame member and Paralympian, Candace Cable, LA Times featured woodworker and a new voice in the death positive movement, CC Boyce, award-winning game designer/storyteller John Zuur Platten, international champion of rights-based aid and former President of Oxfam America, Ray Offenheiser, the series seeks will bring you into some spell-bindingly intimate conversations with people at the forefront of change. Their work significantly impacts us all.

You can find Change Lab's Agents of Change wherever you listen to podcasts - Spotify, Apple or IHeartRadio. We will be releasing the first one this week.

Housing for Hoarau!

We have a wonderful new engineering intern, Mathieu Hoarau, coming from France this Fall (to Los Angeles) and he is looking for housing (18 wks.) If you have any leads, please email him at mathieu.hoaraulevet@viacesi.fr. And, thanks a bunch.

Change Lab®

850 S. Broadway Street, Suite 1005
Los Angeles, CA 90014 (310) 339-8993
Boston. Los Angeles.
www.changelab.studio